Even the best intentions can lead to costly estate planning mistakes. In this engaging presentation, you'll learn what your Will does—and doesn't—control, why beneficiary designations matter more than most people realize, when making lifetime gifts can backfire, why your divorce decree may not protect your assets the way you expect, how to safeguard your home in a blended family, and the surprising role estate planning law played in a famous true crime case.

Jill Mastroianni is an estate planning attorney with more than a decade of experience in trusts, estates, probate, and tax planning.

She is the founder of Death Readiness and host of The Death Readiness Podcast, where she translates complex legal concepts into practical conversations about family, preparation, and legacy. The podcast exists for the same reason her legal practice does: to help people make informed decisions, reduce future conflict, and give their loved ones greater clarity and confidence.

Jill is also the author of The Death Readiness Playbook, a practical guide to organizing your information, documenting your wishes, and making life easier for the people you love when they need it most.

She earned her bachelor's degree from Dartmouth College, her Juris Doctor from Vanderbilt University Law School, and her Master of Laws (LL.M.) in Taxation from New York University.
